D12.12:

AND LIVING AN ADVENTURE IN THE ARMY NATIONAL GUARD.

For some doctors, it takes more than a day on the links to recover from their rounds. It takes a complete change of pace.

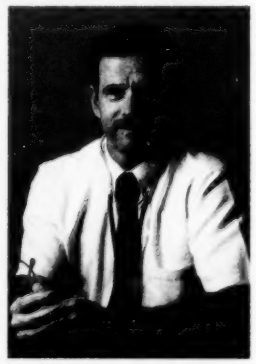
That's why Jim Roberts, and thousands of other physicians, serve part-time in their hometown Army National Guard.

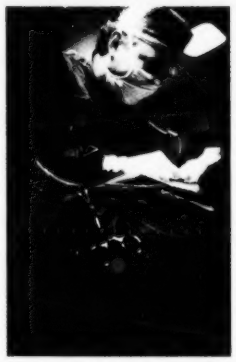
Two days a month and two weeks a year, they work with talented, dedicated professionals. They exchange ideas. They also solve problems—problems that may take them rappelling down a ravine, or crossing a flooded river on a rope crawl.

Join them in the Army Guard, and you'll be appointed a commissioned officer. And you'll be eligible for benefits like free air travel, CME's and exchange privileges.

The Guard can help you pay your medical school expenses.

Even if you haven't finished med school, there's a place for you in the Guard. In the Guard you will receive a monthly paycheck and the benefit of available clerkships and CME's. They'll even arrange your training schedule around your study schedule. Plus, you'll get hands-on medical experience and the chance to make contacts with professionals from all kinds of medical specialties.





Defend your country, help your community, and enjoy a change of pace.

No matter how you look at it, the Guard offers rewards you just won't find anywhere else. To find out more, just send back the attached card.
